

MOVING PICTURE
TRAP CATCHES THE GOOD SAMARITANSponsored Small Boys Who Had Been Barred and Must Pay Fine.

William Wulser's kindness of heart and his sympathy for two little boys in their hour of need today led him to a cell in the Adams street police station, with the alternative of paying a fine of $10 or passing an equal number of days in prison. The offense for which the man is held is that he took two small boys to a moving picture show without the consent of the mother, although the mother had authorized the boys to go to the show and had given them the money to pay for their admission.

One day last week Peter Reynolds, a youth who has reached the proud age of ten, was charged by his teacher to prepare a composition from a subject of his own selection. It occurred to the boy that he might go over and see a moving picture show and get an idea that would mark him as one of the future greats in the realm of literature. Peter confided the scheme to his mother. She thought well of it and agreed to finance the proceeding. Then the lad asked one of his small friends to go along and see the ambitious scholar pursue knowledge in a novel form.

Couldn't Get In.
The two small savants found a barrier to literature in the person of a homely and shrewd person who guarded the portals of the picture show.

"Gave out of this," remarked the unsympathetic guardian of the gate. "These kids can't come in here without their parents to fetch them."

A little flood of tears came into the eyes of the boys.
Just then Wulser came along. He inquired what things appeared to bring grief to the twins. They told him the whole story. He volunteered to get them in. Capt. Carey of the police force heard of the case and had Wulser taken to court. The mother said that while she had not authorized Wulser to take her boy to the show, she had no objection and would have done so herself.

To-day when Wulser was arraigned, he was told by Magistrate Nash that under Chapter 15 of Part 1, Penal Code, he had no discretion but to fine the defendant from $10 to $50, and that the Court could not suspend the sentence. The lightest fine was imposed, but as the man didn't have the ten spot, he had to go to a cell while his friends hustled for the money.

Pie-Bakers Arrested in Raids.
Three bakers were arrested today in the crusade of the Board of Health in the Bronx against pie-makers who use chemicals. They are: Max Muller, No. 228 Webster avenue; Charles Coy, No. 258 East One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street; and Samuel Forster, No. 423 Tremont avenue. C. P. O'Connor, a city chemist, reported that there was a large proportion of benzene of soda in the pies. Magistrate Breen, in Morrisania Court, fixed bail for each baker at $10 and paroled them until they brought the amount.

Disc Records at that this sale does not begin to-day. It begins at 3.30 Friday morning.

How can we do it? A famous concern recently in introducing the double disc records decided to discontinue making 12-inch single face records. For that reason we were able to buy their entire stock of standard 12-inch Grand Opera and other high-class Records (about 50,000 in all) at such concessions that we can sell them at a price that is positively startling.
